

Finalizing the Case Study

Weekly Report 26 - 03/25/19 to 03/31/19

This week was extremely productive in writing the case study portion of the case study. Almost all of it has been completed this past week, including some revisions to the previously written sections. Again, research on mental illness and funding for mental illness is still not completed, some progress has been made. Information regarding recidivism rates and the benefits of treatments programs was researched, which also led to the solution section of the case study. This research provided information on the difficulties in maintaining mental illness treatment for inmates once they are released from prison, which led to the solution of treatment programs to aid in this transition. While similar to some already existing programs that help low level offenders with mental illness to avoid jail time all together, this solution would focus on the transition for those that could not avoid a prison sentence.

To continue productivity on the final product this week, I will be finalizing the case study and sending it to Ms. Petty at the very beginning of the week. While the "Further Recommendations" sections needs to be added, almost all of the case study sections are already finished. Additional details and statistics must also be added to the study to show the amount of research done. Furthermore, the proposal work will be started to follow in line with the dates on my final product calendar. This will include some additional research on funding along with formatting the design to match my color scheme. Along with this, I will be deciding on an outline for the proposal to follow into next week as writing continues. Depending on how long the first portion of writing takes, time may also be spent this week on formatting the brochure and its own outline.
